THURSDAY, NOV. 12, 1896.

E. L. DAVISON, JR.

SINCE the election we hear reports from all parts of the country giving indications of a general revival of business and enterprise. Factories are being started, industries are moving ahead, and financial authorities say that confidence is rapidly being restored. Whether this is the result of McKinley's election or is simply due to the fact that all uncertainty as to the future financial policy of this government has been removed, is a question. We are inclined to think that both are responsible. It is the restoration of confidence that has opened factories and caused money to be put out again and to circulate in the channels of commerce. It is the duty of everyone to put aside chagrin or disappointment at the defeat of a cause which he may have championed and help along this revival in business and prosperity. Mr. Bryan in his message of congratulation to Mr. McKinley very clearly expressed the situation when he said: "We have submitted the issue to the American people, and their will is law." The majority of the people selected the instrumentality through which, in their judgment, could be secured the restoration of confidence, the maintenance of the public credit, the active investment of capital and the increased employment of labor, and it is the duty of every good citizen to submit to the will of the people, and encourage and believe in the better things that are in store for us.

The voters of the county did not favor the issue of bonds which to buy turnpikes a little bit. The result of the vote on the question at the election showed a majority of about 1300 against the bond issue. Only 147 votes were registered in favor of the issue. As the matter now stands the turnpike companies are the losers. Their roads have been made free to the traveling public, irregularly and illegally. It is true, but nevertheless they are free to travel. The object of the proposed bond issue was that the county might reimburse the turnpike companies the value of their roads thus so forcibly seized as it were, by the people. The voters, however, plainly expressed themselves as being opposed to paying for a privilege which they are already enjoying free of cost, and voted down the bond issue, and thus the matter stands. The turnpike companies have a remedy if they will apply it. They could put in their tollgates again and demand toll for the use of their roads and run the risk of having them torn down again. If the companies refuse to take this step towards protecting their own property, it strikes us as unreasonable that they should expect the county to reimburse them for property seized by parties for whose acts the county cannot be held as responsible.

There is considerable talk in political circles just now over the election of U. S. Senator from Kentucky, and there is a strong feeling out that Gov. Bradley will win the race. Dr. Hunter, one of the gamblers, it is said, has no desire to enter the race again, but such is his antagonism to Bradley, it is thought that should the Governor try for the prize that Hunter will oppose him for the sake of 68 cents, and there will be another factional fight in the party.

Joe Blackburn, with an eye on the governor's chair for himself in the event of Bradley's success, it is said will favor the latter's cause. It is almost certain that an extra session of the legislature will be called by the governor to decide the senatorship.

SEVERAL contests are announced by candidates in Kentucky. Dr. Hunter will probably contest the election of Ebes, and it is announced that the election of Hon. Sam J. Pugh in the Ninth Kentucky Congressional district, will be contested by his sister, Democratic opponent, W. Larns Thomas. J. Soule Smith, silver Democrat, has served notice that he will contest the legislative seat of R. P. Stoll, Republican Representative elect from the city of Lexington.

The Hartford Republican says that Ohio county Republicans have much to feel proud of. Although the county has gone a little Popocratic it is still Republican by an increased majority for Hon. John W. Lewis. Fighting against odds as the Ohio county Republicans have been it makes it the greatest victory that has ever been known in Ohio county politics.

It is thought at Washington that President Cleveland may call an extra session of Congress at any time, and members are holding themselves in readiness to be on hand at the call.

How to Cure Bilious Colic.

I suffered for weeks with colic and pains in my stomach caused by biliousness and had to take medicine all the while until I used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which cured me. I have since recommended it to a good many people. Mrs. F. B. Fatherson, Conn. Persons who are subject to bilious colic can ward off the attack by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms appear. For sale by Haydon & Robertson, Druggists.

Food indigestion, liver and indigestion a bottle of Sarsaparilla is just the thing. See a bottle. Take no substitute. See advertisement elsewhere.

Mr. N. N. Osburn, well known at Woodstock, Mich., was troubled with a lame back. He was persuaded to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It gave him relief in one night. This remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by Haydon & Robertson, Druggists.

Take Laxative Bromo Quinine Tablets. All druggists refund the money if it fails to cure. See advertisement elsewhere.

The three-year-old boy of J. A. Johnson, of Lynn Center, Ill., is subject to attacks of croup. Mr. Johnson says he is satisfied that the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, during a severe attack, saved his little boy's life. He is in the drug business, a member of the firm of Johnson Bros. of that place, and he handles a great many patent medicines for lung and throat diseases. He had all these to choose from, and skilled physicians ready to respond to his call, but he selected this remedy for use in his own family at a time when his child's life was in danger, because he knew it to be superior to any other and famous the country over for its cures of croup. Mr. Johnson says this is the best selling croup medicine they handle, and that it gives splendid satisfaction in all cases. Sold by Haydon & Robertson, Druggists.

Sutherland's Kedge Eye Salve Cures.

The New Hook Spoon Free to All.
I read in the Christian Standard that Miss A. M. Fritz, Station A, St. Louis, Mo., would give an elegant plated hook spoon to anyone sending her ten 3-cent stamps. I sent for one and found it so useful that I showed it to my friends and made it in two hours taking orders for the spoon. The hook spoon is a household necessity. It can slip into any dish or cooking vessel, being held in its place by a hook on the back. This spoon is something that housekeepers have needed ever since spoons were invented. Anyone can get a sample spoon by sending ten 3-cent stamps to Miss Fritz; this is a splendid way to make money around home. Werrin, J. S.

Wheat Deterioration.

Professor C. C. Geoperson of the Kansas state experiment station says: That wheat does deteriorate in the course of years under the care that the average farmer gives his crop. I think must be conceded. The yield becomes less, the grain of an inferior quality, and the millers complain that the proportion of bran to flour is too large. From what mention it would be most desirable to secure a change of seed cannot be ascertained positively. In our experience here at the station we have as a general thing had the best results from wheat grown in about the same latitude to the westward of us. The start for our best yielding varieties came from Virginia, Maryland and Ohio. A variety of superior merit, produced only by selection and culture under the most favorable conditions, can maintain its superiority only when grown and selected with the same care which produced it. Our farmers do not give their wheat that care and culture, and the legitimate result is that it deteriorates. The main cause of deterioration, then, is under the control of the farmer himself.

Shrinkage of Wool.

A writer in Farm and Home tells about an experiment undertaken to determine the loss occasioned by shrinkage of wool. The indications from this investigation are that: First, early clipped medium wool, from a well kept flock free from dirt and stored in good quarters, will not shrink in weight to any appreciable extent within a year from date of shearing; second, late clipped wool, of substantially the same kind, will, under the same treatment, shrink about 5 per cent of its original weight within a year. It is probable that heavy, gray wool will shrink considerably more than this. Wool dealers state that they can handle the kind of wool in the early part of the season without sustaining a heavy loss in weight. Before deciding to hold wool it is well to take into consideration the kind and condition of the clip and calculate the probable loss from shrinkage.

COMMON SPICES.

Cinnamon is the inner bark of a tree of the laurel family. Cardamom seeds of excellent quality are grown in Germany. The ordinary red pepper has long been used as a medicine. The leaves and even the bark of the nutmeg tree are said to have the fragrance of the seed. The mite seed plant grows spontaneously in most of the countries around the Mediterranean. Cinnamon was brought to Greece and Rome before the time of Christ by Arabian merchants.

CORN FODDER.

Housing and Shredding—In Ohio—In the Prairie States the best crop to supplement short meadows is unquestionably corn fodder, and the best way to handle corn fodder is just now a subject of foremost importance. When the services of a shredder can be obtained, undoubtedly the most profitable way to handle fodder is to shred and store it away in barns or sheds. An Ohio correspondent of Prairie Farmer, who believes that an acre of good corn fodder shredded is equal in food value to two tons of timothy hay, tells the next best disposition to make of fodder where shredders cannot be made available. He advises as follows:

Draw the fodder to the barn immediately after haying and store away for winter consumption. The plan we have in temporary sheds after the corn is hushed and at the first favorable opportunity—that is, when the fodder is rather moist, not wet, and the weather dry—draw it immediately to the barn or shed and store it away much as you would store grain. If the fodder is wet, it cannot be packed in rows horizontally without molding. Dump fodder should be set upon end in order that the air may circulate through the bundles. If possible, avoid hauling it when dry and crisp, as the loss from breaking will be very serious. If protracted dry weather prevails, the work should be deferred, observing the bundles of fodder should be sprinkled with water in the evening and housed early in the morning before the moisture evaporates. This was the plan pursued by many Ohio farmers during the drought of 1894-5. The question may be asked, Does it pay? And I answer substantiatingly, Yes.

Aside from the comfort and convenience in feeding, the food value of stored corn fodder is at least 95 per cent greater than that which has been hauled or piled by months of exposure to wind and weather. If I were obliged to choose between housing timothy hay and fodder, I would quickly decide in favor of the latter. Timothy hay can be successfully stacked without appreciable loss, but corn fodder must be housed in order to maintain its full value. If an ordinary farm wagon is used to draw the fodder, its capacity may be increased by lengthening the coupling pole and constructing a low rigging or ladder upon which to carry the fodder. Few wheels will hold greatly to its convenience of such a conveyance.

Rhubarb Plants.

Rhubarb plants may be safely set both in fall and spring, but if fall set the crowns should be well covered with earth to prevent heaving and exposure of the roots during winter. For rhubarb, though a very hardy plant, will not endure rapid alterations of freezing and thawing when exposed to the air, and is, therefore, not well adapted for very moist soils in a cold climate. What is wanted in rhubarb culture is an early, rapid and vigorous leaf growth, with the accompanying large and juicy leaf stalks. Rural New Yorker tells that there is nothing better than the early application of fermenting horse manure for this purpose.

New Remedy For Children Eczema.

At the Arkansas station they are using a new mixture for the extermination of lice on fowls and animals. It has been named kerosec extract of pyrethrum. One and a half gallons kerosec are soaked through 2 1/2 pounds pyrethrum (persian insect powder), forming a yellow, oily extract. Dissolve a pound of soap in a gallon of the extract and churn till thoroughly emulsified. When using, mix a pint of this emulsion with 3 pints of water. This mixture combines the properties of kerosec and pyrethrum and is cheaper and more convenient than either.

Building Silos.

The essential points in building silos, as summed up in a bulletin on silos issued from the New York station, are: To have the walls tight enough to exclude air from the contents; to have the walls not only strong, but rigid; to have sufficient depth, 30 feet or more, if possible. There should be no more than about five square feet of feeding surface in the silo for each cow. The larger the silo the cheaper the storage for each ton of silage. The larger the herd the more cheaply can silage be supplied to each animal.

Oats and Ends.

The hay crop over the Pacific slope is reported as one of the largest ever cut. Dear in mind the fact that loan logs must be furnished to meet a growing demand. The sixth annual report of the Ohio farmers' institutes shows that 137 regular and 81 independent meetings were held the past winter and spring, and there would have been more if appropriations had allowed.

There were 108 farmers' institutes held in Wisconsin last winter.

The advantages of spraying have been so apparent that the legislature provided for county and state inspection and makes it obligatory upon all fruit growers. Irrigation will double the production of melon and cucumber vines, if judiciously applied.

Professor Roentgen is the hero of the hour in Germany. He is showing upon him in his Würzburg home, and the university students organized a grand torchlight procession through the town to his home to congratulate the professor on his wonderful discovery.

Sir Douglas Straight, who replaces Henry Cost as editor of Mr. Astor's Pall Mall Gazette, was called to the bar as long ago as 1855. Afterward he became justice at Allahabad, British India. He returned to London in 1881 with an enviable reputation and a pension.
